Syracuse University Career Services is pleased to present the results of the Syracuse University Class of 2010 Placement Report. The following provides information on the post-graduate activities of bachelor's degree recipients from December 2009 and May, June, and August 2010. This report is based on responses from 956 out of 2,585 bachelor's degree recipients, representing 37 percent of the graduating class.

Most of the information in this report was received in response to an online survey e-mailed to graduates in October 2010, with reminder e-mails sent in November and again in December. This report represents a collaborative effort between Career Services and individual schools and colleges. We would especially like to thank all of our colleagues in the Career Services Network who contributed information to this year's report.: Connie Caldwell from the School of Architecture; Sarah Hagelin from the School of Information Studies; Angela Petrucco from the Martin J. Whitman School of Management; Karen McGee from the S.I. Newhouse School of Public Communications; and Karen Davis from L.C. Smith College of Engineering and Computer Science.

Based on this year's report, the job market was even more challenging for the Class of 2010 than it was for graduates of the previous year, reflecting a continued reluctance by employers to add to their payrolls. While fewer graduates reported full-time employment and not as many of those who were employed were working in their career fields, there were some bright spots. There was an increase in students who found jobs through campus resources, those students who were employed found their positions earlier and, in general, average salaries increased significantly.

- For 2010 graduates, 18 percent report receiving their position through on-campus recruiting, career fair, or a connection through their school/college. This represents an increase from 14 percent in 2009.

- More 2010 graduates found their jobs more quickly this year as 39 percent of those employed after six months found positions prior to graduation. This compares to 29% in 2008. Three months after graduation, 77 percent of 2010 graduates employed had obtained their positions compared to 70 percent in 2009.

- The average salary for the Syracuse University Class of 2010 was $43,000, a substantial rebound from $40,932 in 2009. This year also compares favorably to the average salaries reported in previous years: $42,400 for the Class of 2008 and $39,731 in 2007.

Following are some additional highlights from the Class of 2010 Placement Report:

- For 2010, 60 percent of respondents report that they were employed full-time. This is even lower than the 65 percent reporting full-time employment in 2009 and reflects the stagnant job market nationwide during this time. For comparison, in the previous five years the percentage of graduates reporting full-time employment was between 74 and 79 percent.

- This year's results also suggest that more graduates are accepting jobs outside of their interests as only 87 percent of those who found work indicated that their position was related to their career goals. While still fairly high it is a decrease from the 90 percent in 2009, 94 percent in 2008 and 93 percent in 2007 who responded that their positions related to their career goals.

- Graduates reporting that they are continuing their studies represented 21 percent of respondents for the Class of 2010, exactly the same as 2009. This represents an increase from 18% in the previous two years supporting the trend for graduates to continue their education during a tight job market.

- The overall placement rate (full-time employment plus graduate school attendance) for the Class of 2010 dropped to 81 percent from 86 percent in 2009. This after reaching 94% in 2008 and 95% for 2006 and 2007. The only other time in the past decade this percentage was below 90% was in 2003 when the placement rate was 89 percent.

- Even in a difficult job market, the most effective method by which graduates find positions continues to be through developing their own employment leads. Forty two percent of all respondents report that they obtained their position by either networking or applying directly to an organization.

- Internships continue to be a strong source of jobs for 2010 graduates as 20 percent reported obtaining their position through an internship. Though not as high as the 25 percent reported in 2009, it still reflects a continuing trend by employers of filling full-time hires from their intern programs

- The geographic profile of our graduates remains very similar to past years. Our graduates found employment in 33 states and several foreign countries, (5 percent found employment abroad), but most stay within this region of the country. For 2010, 54 percent of respondents who are employed full-time are working in New York State. Another 21 percent report working in one of the states adjoining New York (MA, CT, VT, NJ or PA.) For 2010, 14 percent indicated that they were employed in Central New York, up from 12 percent in 2009. Fifty six percent of respondents attending graduate school full-time are doing so in New York State with another 13 percent in adjoining states. In 2009, the percentage of respondents reporting full-time employment in New York State was 52 percent, and 53 percent reported attending graduate school in New York State.

- Of all 2010 graduates who reported that they are attending graduate school full-time, 41 percent are enrolled at Syracuse University. Other schools that were popular for 2010 graduates were Columbia University, University of Pennsylvania, Pittsburgh, New York University, Michigan, Johns Hopkins and St John's. Nine percent of graduates who report that they are attending graduate school full-time are in law school, down from 16% in 2009. Five percent report that they are attending medical programs, compared to 10 percent in 2009.

The remainder of this report provides more detailed placement outcomes for Syracuse University and each of its schools and colleges. Again, we greatly appreciate the help we have received from our colleagues in compiling this year's placement data. We also welcome comments and suggestions from the Syracuse University community regarding future improvements to our survey process or reporting format. Please feel free to contact us directly with your questions or thoughts. Thank You!
